A Heriotine in Corea.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—The secretary of the navy received a cable message this morning from Rear Admiral Davis, at Nagasaki, announcing a revolution in Corea, and stating that the United States vessels Trenton and Ossipee will go there immediately.

That's Sentence Committed.

LONDON, Dec. 13.—The sentence of Capt. Dudley and Mrs. Stephens, the Mignonette cannibals, has been commuted from hanging to six months imprisonment without labor.

Reduced.

PITTSBURG, Dec. 13.—The 10 to 15 per cent. reduction in the wages of the Union Iron mills' employes has been accepted and work will be continued after Monday as usual.

Chatter at Sea.

GIBRALTAR, Dec. 13.—The steamer "Maitte Brazza," an Italian vessel, engaged in transporting emigrants from South American ports, put in here for coal and provisions. She left Geneva for South America two months ago, but the cholera broke out among her passengers and twenty deaths occurred. In Affairs in France.

MARSEILLE, Dec. 13.—Many counselors of the department of Conches, in Rhone demand in convention of extraordinary session a general council to protest against the proposed increase of duty on foreign cereals.

The Gaulois says: "France has purchased seven British steamers for use in conveying troops to China."

The tariff committee has presented a report to the chamber of deputies relative to the production of cereals. It states that the yield of cereals in France has steadily increased during the last thirty years and at present the average yield per hectare is equal to the average yield in America. The importation of grain from foreign countries has a tendency to diminish prices and thus the price of French production will not be regulated by the cost of production, but by the maximum price obtainable in France for the cereals of India and America. These could be sold five or six francs per centime under the usual price and consequently are able to bear a duty of three francs without any resulting rise in prices.

A Reported Lynching.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 13.—A morning paper publishes the statement that Hezekiah Brown, a colored school teacher in lonely part of Howard county, was hanged yesterday by thirteen masked men. It is charged that he became too intimate with a young woman, whom he declared he had married. The lynching is said to have occurred in a wild section of the county, which is sparsely populated. At Ellicott City, the county seat of Howard, nothing was heard of the lynching, and the state's attorney has sent a messenger to ascertain the facts.

Fire.

NORFOLK, Va., Dec. 13.—B. Kahn & Co., hats and gentlemen's furnishing goods and ball dress goods, was destroyed by fire this morning. Loss $30,000; insurance $25,000. The building was used for the storage of cars and a large number burned.

The depot of the Philadelphia Traction Co., Forty-first street and Haverford road, burned this morning. Loss $30,000; insurance $25,000. The building was used for the storage of cars and a large number burned.

OTTAWA, Dec. 13.—From the 1st of January to the 20th of November the arrivals of immigrants into Canada were 144,000, against 172,000 for the same period last year. Of this total 84,000 were arrivals of persons to settle in Canada, and the rest came as passengers for the United States. During the same period last year there arrived 103,000 immigrant settlers for Canada.

The Weekly Bank Statement.

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—The bank's weekly statement shows the following changes: Loans increase, $2,181,000; specie decrease, $452,000; legal tender increase, $678,000; deposits increase, $1,083,000; circulation increase, $55,000; reserve decrease, $44,000. The banks now hold $42,252,000 in excess of legal requirements.

A Heriotine in Corea.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—The secretary of the navy received a cable message this morning from Rear Admiral Davis, at Nagasaki, announcing a revolution in Corea, and stating that the United States vessels Trenton and Ossipee will go there immediately.

Chatter at Sea.

GIBRALTAR, Dec. 13.—The steamer "Maitte Brazza," an Italian vessel, engaged in transporting emigrants from South American ports, put in here for coal and provisions. She left Geneva for South America two months ago, but the cholera broke out among her passengers and twenty deaths occurred. In consequence of this no South American port would permit her passengers to land and the ship was forced to return with them.

No Cut.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 13.—The general freight agent of the Pennsylvania railroad denies there has been any general cutting of through freight rates by the parties to the trunk line pool.

Washington News.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—Conferees upon the bill for the forfeiture of the Atlantic and Pacific land grant held a final meeting to day and disagreed. The house conferees refuse to assent to any provision which would send the question to the courts.

Afraid of "Pecan."

CAIRO, Dec. 13.—The Nile expedition is advancing much more rapidly and it is thought with favorable wind the forces will arrive at Ambukal sooner than anticipated. It is reported that the Mahdi's tent is constantly surrounded by a triple line of guards. He is afraid of being poisoned. His favorite wife or daughter prepares his food.

Dinner at New.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 13.—The steamer Westmoreland, from Rappahannock, arrived to day. Those on board report a destruction of life by Wednesday's storm much greater than heretofore reported. Off Canoe house Landing, a considerable distance above Urbana, several boats swamped and all on board perished. At least thirty people were drowned.

London Alarmed.

LONDON, Dec. 13, 6:30 p. m.—A terrific explosion has just occurred in this city. The report is similar to that caused by the explosion of dynamite. One report is that the explosion was of gas in the railroad arches to Alley street. Another is that the bridge over the Thames has been exploded. Inquiry will be made immediately into the circumstances of the explosion.

A Suburban Sensation.

A Practicing Physician Charged With Having Transgressed the Law.

The little town of Pierston, in Kosciusko county and the country round about is now in a great hub-bub of excitement over a genuine sensation which was made public a few days ago.

Last Saturday a young lady named Mary Lawmaster, living near Wooster, appeared before the deputy prosecutor and had a warrant issued for Dr. Milford Dick, on the charge of rape. The doctor was arrested, entered a plea of not guilty and gave bonds for his appearance at court.

Much interest is excited from the prominence of the parties, the doctor being a native of that locality and having a wide acquaintance.

The Pittsburgh Record.

A representative of THE SENTINEL called at the residence of Hon. J. L. Williams to-day to ascertain the truth of the published report that the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago road had been sold to the Pennsylvania company. Henry M. Williams spoke for his father and said the road had not been sold by its present owners nor would it be for a century or so.

He said there was a movement on foot to transfer active control of the road to the Pennsylvania company and Mr. Williams, Reuben Springer, of Cincinnati, John Larwell, of this city, with others, had voted to give the Pennsylvania company the management of the road. They are to retain their interest in the line and receive their dividends as usual, but when the Pennsylvania company wants to make an improvement it could do so without calling a meeting of the board of directors of the Fort Wayne road to get their approval. Oscar A. Simons, Frank and Charles Wilt, of this city, have not yet signed the agreement but will and Mr. Williams thinks it will be a good thing for Fort Wayne.

R. W. T. DeWald and his sisters, Miss Carrie, and Mr. John Mohr, went to Chicago to-day. This is Bob's first visit to Chicago and he was very indignant because he didn't find the "Battle of Gettysburg" and the "Siege of Paris" lying about the streets. Bob saw another wonder, but he won't give it away.

Deputy Supreme Chancellor Doyle will institute a council of the Catholic Benevolent Legion at Library hall Monday evening. All who have subscribed and all who are desirous of procuring membership are requested and invited to be present.

Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Hillegas will next Tuesday inspect a snug little cottage on Madison street.

Mr. Frank W. Meegan, of Chicago, will arrive in this city this evening to pay his parents' short visit.

Dr. Arthur Dodge has been at Bluffton all this week. Mr. Dodge is an expert veterinary surgeon and makes big money.

Pat Vizard struck his father John Vizard and the old man had his son arrested. Justice Ryan sent the bad youth to jail.

An encore club is to be organized in this city. Only men who have scars on their knuckles are eligible to membership.

F. J. Young, of Zanesville, is in the city. Mr. Young says he will be a candidate for county superintendent in the spring.

Joe W. Bell has established a wholesale saddlery hardware store on East Columbia street, as successor to Rogers, Lewis & Co.

Mrs. Murray Hartnett will entertain a number of friends on Wednesday evening next, in honor of Miss Effie Putnam, of Flint, Mich.

Wabash is to have another paper to be called the Cyclone. There is no thing in a name but cyclones are generally noted for their briefness.

Rev. DeWitt Talmage did not occupy the Tabernacle pulpit last Sunday. Today's supplement contains interesting news of a local character.

John Zimmerman has opened a drug store in the Seibold building, on Broadway. Mr. Zimmerman used to do business on West Jefferson street.

Wm. Kaough left for Detroit to-day on business tour. Mr. Kaough is a little late settling up his affairs, because he neglected them to serve the democratic party.

Pfeiffer & Schlatter, the enterprising hardware merchants at the southeast corner of Columbia and Clinton streets, are making some decided improvements in their store.

John Taylor, a drunkard just discharged from jail, filled up again yesterday and had to be carted to the calaboose in a sleigh. He is a guest of Sheriff Nelson.

The indications for the lower lake region as reported by the weather bureau at Washington to THE SENTINEL are as follows: Clearing weather, variable winds, generally westerly, lower temperature.

Declarator Democrat. John McMullen, the contractor of Fort Wayne, who built several fine residences in this city last summer, was here visiting his old friends yesterday. John is a good one, but how about that glove business?

Pat J. McDonald goes into the water works trustees' office next week and January 1 will take charge of affairs. W. E. McDermott, the present incumbent, will do short hand reporting and, as he is one of the best stenographers in the west, his services will be in demand.

S. R. Alden will leave for New York City this evening via the Wabash, arriving in New York City Sunday evening at 9 o'clock. Wednesday evening Mr. Alden will be married to Miss Carrie Savin at All Souls church. Mr. and Mrs. Alden will come direct here and occupy a cozy cottage on West Berry street.

S. R. Alden, as assignee of H. C. Maderwell and Co., has sold the carpets of the firm to Marah Field & Co., of Chicago, and the window shades and curtains to Root & Co., of this city. The furniture alone remains to be sold and Mr. Alden expects to settle with the creditors of the firm about the middle of January.

The Nebraska stock business has been partially explained. Some one has peeped into Mr. Kley's residence through a window and the tipping is accounted for by the fact that a railroad man comes home every night at a certain hour and his taps on the door of his residence sound so as to seem to come from Mr. Kley's residence. Mr. Kley and his family were annoyed by the throng of people who watch his house to get a glimpse of the ghost.

THE COURT HOUSE.

After hearing arguments in the United States court the term closed this morning.

Judge Woods and the other officials of the United States court returned to Indianapolis this morning.

Andrew Schlossberg has been granted a liquor license and has deposited the fee with the school fund.

In the superior court Judge Hinch occupied the entire morning in settling issues and setting cases for trial.

The county commissioners will next Tuesday inspect the jail and county jail and then adjourn until March.

The viewers of the Simons' gravel road, running south from Oregon Avenue, reported to-day. The hearing will be in January.

A. H. Bittinger got judgment against Peter Kiser for $150. Mr. Bittinger was all Kiser's attorney in a slander suit against the old man.

Messrs. Colerick and Oppenheim will apply to Judge O'Rourke for a new trial for Wm. Boyle, if he refuses the supreme court will be appealed to.

A motion was made for a new trial in the Motherwell Iron and Steel Co. vs. Hiram Iddings, which was taken under advisement by Judge Woods.

Judge Wood, to-day in the United States court, in the case of First National bank of Fort Wayne vs. Henry M. Burgess et al remanded the case to the state court.

Dora Moore has sued Columbus Moore for divorce. The SENTINEL cannot air Mrs. Moore's grievances, because her attorney, J. L. Wiseman, has the complaint in his pocket.

Permit to have been granted to James Morton and Sarah Reed, Henry Hinckle and Sophia Bruus, Henry Fiegel and Katie Goller and Jacob Baring and Katie Sheppard.

In the United States court yesterday there was a motion for a new trial of the Fitch-Hale case. A judgment stands against the Merriam Hale for assaulting Mr. Fitch on the Huntington race track,

In the case of Louis A. Wright vs. Charles Pape for breach of contract, the demand being $2,000, the defendant was examined in Mr. Robert Stratton's law office and his testimony in the case.

The only criminal cases now awaiting trial in the circuit court are the state against Fred Richards, for murder; the state against Fred Beach, the second hand man, for assault and battery and the case against Mrs. Wm. Heinz for a similar offense.

LOVE OR MONEY.

The Best Story of the Season.

Julia caught it in a moment. She blushed, and laughed heartily. "Oh, you good, silly thing!" said she; "and it is the truth, for I am as proud as I can be, and if he does leave me I will turn round that moment and make you in love with me."

Walter looked queer. This was a turn he had not counted on.

"Do you think I couldn't, sir?" said she, sharply.

"It is not for me to limit the power of beauty," said Walter, meekly.

"Say the power of flattery. I could cajole any man in the world—if I chose."

"Then you are a dangerous creature, and I will make Fitzroy my shield. I'm off to the Dun Cow."

"You are a duck," said this impetuous beauty. "So there! She took him round the neck with both hands, and gave him a most delicious kiss."

"Why, he must be mad," replied the recipient, bluntly. She laughed at that, and he went straight to the Dun Cow. He found young Fitzroy sitting rather disconsolate, and opened his errand at once by asking him if it was true that they were to lose him.

Percy replied stiffly that it was true.

"What a pity!" said Walter.

"I don't think I shall be m—much m—missed," said Percy, rather suddenly.

"Then two people who will miss you."

"I don't know one."

"Two, I assure you—Miss Clifford and myself. Come, Mr. Fitzroy, I will not beat about the bush. I am afraid you are mortified, and I must say, justly mortified, at the coolness my father has shown to you. But I assure you that it is not from any disrespect to you personally."

"Oh, indeed?" said Percy, ironically. "Not quite the reverse—he is afraid of you."

"That is a g—g—good joke."

"No; let me explain. Fathers are curiosities to us people. If they are ever so disinterested in their general conduct, they are sure to be a little mercenary for their children. Now, you know, Miss Clifford is a beauty who would adore Clifford Hall, and an heiress whose money would purchase certain properties that join ours. You understand?"

"Yes," said the little man, starting up in great wrath. "I understand, and it's a—b—ainable. I thought you were my friend, and a m—man of b—boner."

"So I am; and that is why I warn you in time. If you quarrel with Miss Clifford, and leave this place in a pet, just to see what risks we both run, you and I. My father will be always at me, and I shall not be able to insist on your prior claim; he will say you have abandoned it. Julie will take the huff, and you know beautiful women will do strange things—mad things—when once pique enters their hearts. She might turn round and marry me."

"You forget, sir, you are a man of honor."

"But not a man of stone. Now, my dear Fitzroy, be reasonable. Suppose that peerless creature went in for female revenge; why, the first thing she would do would be to make me love her; whether I chose or no. She wouldn't give me a voice in the matter. She would flatter me; she would cajole me; she would transfix my too susceptible heart with glances of fire and bewitching languor from those glorious eyes."

"D—d—! Ahem!" cried Percy, turning green.

Walter had no mercy. "I heard her once she could make any man love her if she chose."

"So she could," said Percy, ruefully. "She made me. I had an awful p—prejudice against her, but there was no resisting."

"Then don't subject me to such a trial. Stick to her like a man."

"So I will; b—but it is a m—m—mortifying position. I'm a man of the C—Conquest, and are respected in our—county; and here I have to meet her on the sly, and live at the D—Dun Cow."

"Where the canine is wretched."

"A—b—b—ominable!"

Having thus impregnated his mind with that soothing sentiment, jealousy, Walter told him he had a house to let on the estate—quite a gentleman's house, only a little dilapidated, with a fine lawn and garden, only neglected in a wilderness. "But all the better for you," said he. "You have plenty of money, and no occupation. Perhaps that is what leads to these little quarrels. It will amuse you to repair the crib and restore the lawn. Why, there is a brook runs through it—it isn't every lawn has that—and there used to be water-lilies floating, and peonies nodding down at them from the bank; a paradise. She adores flowers, you know. Why not rent that house from me? You will have constant occupation and amusement. You will become a rival, potente to my governor. You will take the shine out of him directly; you have only to give a ball, and then the girls will worship you, Julie Clifford especially, for she could dance the devil to a stand-still!"

Percy's eyes flashed. "When can I have the place?" said he, eagerly.

"In half an hour. I'll draw you a three months' agreement. Got you a paper? Of course not. Julie is no nearer. What are those? Playing-cards. What do you play? Patience, all by yourself. No wonder you are quarrelsome! Nothing else to bestow your energy on!"

Percy denied this impputation. The cards were for pistol practice. He shot fairly at the pins in the yard.

"It is the dead b—b— that loads your pistols, and your temper too. Didn't I tell you so?"

Walter then demanded the ace of diamonds, and on its face let him the house and premises on a repairing lease for three years, rent £5 a year, which was a good bargain for both parties, since Percy was sure to lay out a thousand pounds or two on the property, and to bind Julie more closely to him, who was worth her weight in gold ten times over.

Walter had brought the keys with him, so he drove Percy over at once and gave him possession, and to do the little fellow justice, the moisture of gratitude stood in his eyes when they parted.

Walter told Julie all about it, same night, and her eyes were eloquent.

The next day he had a walk with Mary Bartley, and told her all about it. She hung upon him, and gazed admiringly into his eyes all the time, and they parted happy lovers.

Mr. Bartley met her at the gate. "Mary," said he, gravely, "who wast thou with just now?"

"Cousin Walter."

"I feared so. You are too much with him."

Mary turned red and white by turns, but said nothing.

Bartley went on: "You are a good child, and I have always trusted you. I am sure you mean no harm. But you must be more discreet. I have just heard that you and that young man are looked upon as engaged lovers. They say it is all over the village. Of course a father in the last to hear these things. Does Mrs. Easton know of this?"

"Stupid old woman! She ought to be ashamed of herself!"

"Oh, papa, and approves it."

"Stupid old woman! She ought to be ashamed of herself."

"Oh, papa," said Mary, in deep distress; why, what objection can there be to Cousin Walter?"

"None whatever as a cousin, but every objection to intimacy. Does he court you?"

"I don't know, papa. I suppose he does."

"Does he seek your love?"

"He does not say so exactly."

"Come, Mary, you have never deceived me. Does he love you?"

"I am afraid he does; and if you reject him he will be very unhappy. And so shall I."

"I am truly sorry to hear it, Mary, for there are reasons why I cannot consent to an engagement between him and you."

"It would not be proper to disclose my reasons; but I hope, Mary, that it will be enough to say that Colonel Clifford has other views for his son, and I have other views for my daughter. Do you think a blessing will attend you or him if you marry both fathers?"

"No, no," said poor Mary. "We have been hasty and very foolish. But, oh, papa, have you not seen from the first? Oh, why did you not warn me in time? Then I could have obeyed you easily. Now it will cost me the happiness of my life. We are very unfortunate. Poor Walter! He left me so full of hope. Shall I do? what shall I do?"

It was Mary Bartley's first grief. She thought all chance of happiness was gone forever, and she wept bitterly for Walter and herself.

Walter was not unmoved, but he could not change his nature. The sum he had obtained by a crime was dearer to him than all his more honest gains. He was kind on the surface, but hard as marble.

"Go to your room, my child," said he, "and try and compose yourself. I am not angry with you. I ought to have watched you. But you are so young, and I trusted to that woman."

Mary retired, sobbing, and he sent for Mrs. Easton.

"Mrs. Easton," said he, "for the first time in all these years I have a fault to find with you."

"What is that, sir, if you please?"

"Young Clifford has been courting that child, and you have encouraged it."

"My, sir," said the woman. "I have not done that. She never spoke to me, nor to her."

"Well, then, you never interfered."

"No, no; more than you did."

"Because I never observed it till to-day."

"How could I know that, sir? Everybody else observed it. Mr. Hope would have been the first to see it, if he had been in your place." This sudden thrust made Bartley wince, and showed him he had a tougher customer to deal with than poor Mary.

"You can't bear to be found fault with, Easton," said he, craftily, "and I don't wonder at it, after fourteen years' fidelity to me."

"I take no credit for that," said the woman, doggedly. "I have been paid for it."

"No doubt. But I don't always get the thing I pay for. Then let by-gones be by-gones; but just assist me now to cure the girl of this folly."

"Sir," said the woman, firmly, "it is not folly; it is wisest and best for all; and I can't make up my mind to lift a finger against it."

"Do you mean to defy me, then?"

"No, sir. I don't want to go against you, nor yet against my own conscience, what's left on. I have seen a pretty while that it must come to this, and I have written to my sister Sally. She keeps a small hotel at the lakes. She is ready to have me, and I'm not too old to be useful to her. I'm worth my board. I'll go there this very day, if you please. I'm as true to you as I can be, sir. For I see by Miss Mary crying so you have spoken to her, and so now she is safe to come to me for comfort; and if she does, I shall take her part, you may be sure, for I love her like my own child."

Here the dogged voice began to tremble; but she recovered herself, and told him she would go at once to her sister Sally, that lived only ten miles off, and next day she would go to the little hotel at the lakes, and leave him to part two true lovers if he could and break both their hearts; she should wash her hands of it.

Bartley asked a moment to consider. "Shall we be friends still if you leave me like that? Surely, after all these years, you will not tell your sister? You will not betray me?"

"Never, sir," said she. "What for? To bring those two together? Why, it would part them forever. I wonder at you, a gentleman, and in business all your life, yet you don't seem to see through the muddy water as I do that is only a plain woman."

She then told him her clothes were nearly all packed, and she could start in an hour.

"You shall have the break and the horses," said he, with great alacrity.

Everything transpires quickly in a small house, and just as she had finished packing, in comes Mary in violent distress. "What, is it true? Are you going to leave me, now my heart is broken? Oh, nurse! nurse!"

Percy denied this impputation. The cards were for pistol practice. He shot fairly at the pins in the yard.

"It is the dead b—b— that loads your pistols, and your temper too. Didn't I tell you so?"

Walter then demanded the ace of diamonds, and on its face let him the house and premises on a repairing lease for three years, rent £5 a year, which was a good bargain for both parties, since Percy was sure to lay out a thousand pounds or two on the property, and to bind Julie more closely to him, who was worth her weight in gold ten times over.

Walter had brought the keys with him, so he drove Percy over at once and gave him possession, and to do the little fellow justice, the moisture of gratitude stood in his eyes when they parted.

"Papa does not love me as I do him," sobbed Mary, turning bitter for the first time. "He breaks my heart, and sends you away the same day, for fear you should comfort me."

"No, my dear," said Mrs. Easton; "you are wrong. He does not mean me away; I go by my own wish."

"Oh, nurse, you desert me! Then you don't know what has happened!"

"Oh yes, I do know all about it; and I'm leaving because I can't do what he wishes. You see it is this way, Miss Mary—your father has been very good to me, and I am his debtor. I must not stay here and help you to thwart him—that would be ungrateful—and yet I can't take his side against you. Master has got reasons why you should not marry Walter Clifford, and—"

"He told me so himself," said Mary. "Ah, but he didn't tell you his reasons."

"No."

"No more must I. But, Miss Mary, I'll tell you this. I know his reasons well; his reasons why you should not marry Walter Clifford are my reasons why you should marry no other man."

"Oh, nurse! of you then, dear angel!"

"So when friends differ like black and white, it's best to part. I'm going to my sister Gilliot this afternoon, and to-morrow to my sister Sally, at her hotel."

"Oh, nurse, must you? must you? I shall have not a friend to advise or console me till Mr. Hope comes back. Oh, I hope that won't be long now!"

Mrs. Easton dropped her hands upon her knees and looked at Mary Bartley.

"What, Miss Mary, would you go to Mr. Hope in such a matter as this? Surely you would not have the face!"

"Not take my breaking heart to Mr. Hope!" cried Mary, with a sudden flood of tears. "You might as well tell me not to lay my trouble before my God. Dear, dear Mr. Hope, who saved my life in those deep waters, and then cried over me, darling dear! I think more of that than of his courage. Do you think I am blind? He loves me better than my own father does, and it is not a young man's love; it is an angel's. Not try to him when I am in the deep waters of affliction! I could not write of such a thing to him for blushing, but the moment he returns I shall find some way to let him know how happy I have been, how broken-hearted I am, and thatapa has reasons against him, and that you are both afraid to let me know these reasons—me, the poor girl whose heart is being made a foot-ball in this house."

"I am truly sorry to hear it, Mary, for there are reasons why I cannot consent to an engagement between him and you."

"It would not be proper to disclose my reasons; but I hope, Mary, that it will be enough to say that Colonel Clifford has other views for his son, and I have other views for my daughter. Do you think a blessing will attend you or him if you marry both fathers?"

"No, no," said poor Mary. "We have been hasty and very foolish. But, oh, papa, have you not seen from the first? Oh, why did you not warn me in time? Then I could have obeyed you easily. Now it will cost me the happiness of my life. We are very unfortunate. Poor Walter! He left me so full of hope. Shall I do? what shall I do?"

"It is that fair girl you introduced me to when riding?"

"Yes."

"She is lovely."

"Miss Clifford, she is an angel."

"Hal hal! We are all angels till we are found out. Who is the man?"

"What man?"

"That she prefers to my good Walter. She deserves a good whipping, your angel."

"Much obliged to you, Miss Clifford; but she prefers no man to your good Walter, though I am not worthy to tie her shoes. Why, we are devoted to each other."

"Well, you needn't fly at me. I am your friend, as you will see. Make me your confidante. Explain, please. How can you be crossed in love if there's no other man?"

"It's her father. He has discovered our love, and forbids her to speak to me."

"Her father!" said Julia, contemptuously. "Is that all? That for her father! You shall have her in spite of fifty fathers. If it had been a lover, now."

"I should have talked to him, not to you," said Walter, with his eyes flashing.

"Be quiet, Walter; as it is not a lover, nor even a mother, you shall have the girl, and a very sweet girl she is. Will you accept me for your ally? Women are wiser than men in these things, and understand one another."

"Oh, Miss Clifford," said Walter, "is that good of you! Of course it will be a great blessing to us both to have your sympathy and assistance."

"Well, then," said Julia, "begin by telling me—have you spoken to her father?"

"No."

"Then it is the very first thing to be done. Come, order our horses. We will ride over directly. I will call on Miss Clifford and you on Mister. Now mind, you must ignore all that has passed, and just ask permission to court his daughter. Whilst you are closeted with him, the young lady and I will learn each other's mind with a certainty you poor slow things have no idea of."

"I see one thing," said Walter, "that I am a child in such matters compared with you. What decision what prompts?"

"Then imitate it, young man. Order the horses directly," and she stamped her foot impatiently.

Walter turned to the stables without another word, and Julia flew up-stairs to put on her riding-habit.

"Oh, with pleasure," said Julia, slyly.

So then Walter drove her to the new house, without a word of remonstrance on her part, and Fitzroy met her radiant, and Walter slipped away round a corner, and when he came back the quarrel had dissolved. He had brought a hamper with all the necessities of life—Tablecloth, napkins, knives, forks, spoons, cold pie, salad, and champagne. They lunched beside the brook on the lawn. The lovers drank his health, and Julia appointed him solemnly to the post of "peacemaker." "Or," said she, "I'll be good, for one."

"Percy?"

"—o; n—never again."

"Then you mustn't be jealous."

"I'm not, I—despite—jealous. I'm above it."</p

WHITE SEAL BURNING OIL

The New York board of health estimates that 50,000 lives have been destroyed by the use of gasoline. If every 1-cent hold would adopt the White Seal oil for family use, none of these unfortunate accidents would occur.

WHITE SEAL BURNING OIL

has none of the defects usually found in common oils. It cannot be exploded, does not char the wick, will not smoke, emits no offensive odor, and prevents the breaking of chimneys.

WHITE SEAL BURNING OIL

is a rich oil for illuminating purposes. It is an entire oil, as pure water. It gives a strong steady light, and burns much longer than common oils.

GAINING GROUND.

Fort Wayne as a Wholesale City as Indicated by Facts Attested by the Merchants.

That Fort Wayne is advantageously located for the carrying on of a wholesale trade will not be denied. The position she occupies geographically is excellent to which is added all the resources which money could procure in the way of transportation. Seven different railroads enter the city radiating in all directions and bearing across the continent the commerce of the greatest nation of the earth. These railroads, as has been aptly said, make thirty-five counties of the state accessible without a change of cars and naturally Fort Wayne becomes the distributing center for all that territory which these same roads have opened and developed in Indiana, Southern Michigan and Western Ohio. What Chicago has been to the great west, Fort Wayne is now and will forever be to this territory embraced in the boundaries named. No city of its size in the union can compete with it in means of transportation and in cheapness of rates.

But more than this is made to make a city one of importance to a country tributary to it. It must possess business men. Men of brains, of good management and men financially able to establish and conduct a business suited to the demands of such a town are potent factors. Fort Wayne has abundantly proven to the world that she possesses such men. A glance at the business interests and the commercial standing of the town is sufficient proof of this statement.

Then possessing these important factors, the location, the means of cheap transportation and the men who are able to take advantage of these powers, can it be true that the wholesale trade of the city is decreasing, that it is an unprofitable business and that the trade which once came here now goes to other cities? It was to investigate these inquiries, to learn the truth and to place the facts before the people that caused a SENTINEL representative to investigate the matter and believing that the best way to solve these questions and to learn the truth was to interview the merchants themselves he followed this course and now presents the results. The merchants here reported do not represent in number those engaged in wholesaling, but sufficient evidence is given to indicate the true condition of affairs.

A. C. TRENTMAN.

The interviewer stepped into the wholesale grocery house of A. C. Trentman and encountered Mr. Trentman seated in his counting room. "The SENTINEL has a mission," ventured the newspaper man, "and that is to give all the news, build up Fort Wayne and grow with the city. Can you tell how your trade this year compares with former years?"

"The volume of business for the past year is better than any former year," replied Mr. Trentman. Continuing said he:

"Of course there was a stringency for the two weeks about the day of election, but trade is now very brisk and the loss has been recovered. Dealers, in fact, do not make heavy purchases, but they buy often, and notwithstanding that prices are not as high, trade equalizes itself nicely and profits are regular. There is an over-production to overcome, but time will work it off all right. There is plenty of money in the country, but there is not a disposition or readiness to use it just now."

"Do you suffer from competition?"

"Not the least," said Mr. Trentman. "We can sell as good goods as any house, sell them at cheap and command at reasonable transportation rates. Our traveling men operate in this state and sell where Chicago and Toledo cannot touch. Yes sir, business is better than last year and the prospects are bright."

LOUIS FOX.

Louis Fox, wholesale dealer in crackers, confectionary and fruits, said to The SENTINEL representative: "I have a better trade this year than last. My salesmen have sold more goods and to good live business men."

"Do you suffer from competition?"

"Not a bit," said Mr. Fox. "I sell throughout the northwest and can compete with New York, Chicago and Toledo. I tell you there is no city better situated than Fort Wayne for railroad facilities and wholesale trade."

ROOT & CO.

E. C. Roote, of the firm of Root & Co., who do a wholesale and retail business, said that sales were good and during the past week enormous. "There is an over-production now," said Mr. Roote, "but manufacturers will close their factories and stop production. People are buying substantial goods this year and are living within their means. Farmers hold their grain for high prices and here we are. I cannot look for a boom in trade for some months, but a good healthy trade will exist. We are doing as well as any house in the country and our wholesale business is greater than it ever has been."

J. M. KANE.

of Kane Bro's., the toy men, was asked how their wholesale trade, during the year just closing, compared with that of previous years. "We do not employ traveling salesmen," replied Mr. Kane, "and our trade outside of our retailing is confined to neighboring towns. In this department I cannot say that there is any great difference between this year's sales and those of last year. Our sales to outside dealers has steadily increased from year to year without any particular effort on our part. The dullness in every department of trade this year has, of course, affected the sales to light dealers, but the trade has, notwithstanding, been as good as last year's."

of Keil Bro's., the booksellers and stationers, in answer to an inquiry said: "Yes, we wholesale and employ traveling salesmen. Our trade this year was largely interfered with because of the delay in our removal to this building and has been dull throughout the year. But during the past ten days I have noticed a marked increase in orders from towns in the territory which we work and I believe our full trade is fully equal to that of last year. Our salesmen travel in every direction and we compete with eastern and Chicago houses."

Continuing Mr. Keil said: "I noticed an article in a morning paper a few days ago in which the assertion was made that the wholesale trade of Fort Wayne was decreasing. It is certainly untrue and I have no doubt that more goods are sold by Fort Wayne houses to other dealers than ever before and instead of the number of wholesale houses decreasing the contrary is true."

GEORGE DEWALD & CO.

"How is business?" spoke The SENTINEL man to Mr. George DeWald, at the head of the firm above named.

"It is immense," said the gentleman, "and sales this year have greatly exceeded last, and although prices are slightly lower the figures will show an increase on our side."

J. B. MONNING.

Mr. Monning manufactures coffee, baking powder, mustard, spices and articles of a similar nature. His wholesale business shows a splendid increase," said, "and," said Mr. Monning, "I expect to increase each succeeding year, because we can produce better quality of goods at more reasonable prices than any house in the northwest. My men sell more goods now than they ever did."

G. B. BURSTY & CO.

This wholesale grocery firm is just preparing to occupy commodious quarters on East Columbia street. The business of the house has steadily grown until Mr. Burstyn finds it necessary to increase his store room: "This is an excellent wholesale center," said Mr. Burstyn, "and we propose to sell all through the northwest, because we can offer better inducements than Chicago, Toledo, or eastern houses."

MONKAN & BEACH.

This great hardware house has a reputation all over the northwest and its wholesale trade has assumed great proportions. Mr. Morganstern that the business of the past year was most flattering and the traveling representatives of the house increase their orders every year. This year was no exception.

COOMBS & CO.

J. M. Coombs is at the head of this great wholesale iron house and its growth from modest business is a startling testimonial to Fort Wayne as a commercial center. Mr. Coombs, of course, feels the depression, but is very hopeful of the future and especially is he satisfied that Fort Wayne is happily situated for interstate commerce.

OTTER HOUSES.

The wholesale houses of Rothschild Bros., clothiers; Meyer Bros., druggists; Woodworth & Bond, dental supplies; M. N. Jacobs, cigars; Fisher Bros., paper; D. N. Foster, furniture; A. C. Huestis & Son, tea; the Standard Oil company and many other houses might be named to show that the wholesale trade is growing in Fort Wayne and The SENTINEL proposes to support it.

The entertainment closed after an interesting debate introduced by Miss E. Fleming, in which she endeavored to convince her hearers that "This World is not a Vale of Tears," while her opponent, Miss R. Grafe, endeavored, with equal energy, to convince them to the contrary.

The manner in which the young ladies acquitted themselves of their various exercises reflects credit upon themselves and their teachers.

Among your Christmas gifts, husbands, do not forget that one of the most useful presents, to your wife, is a large bottle of Pond's Extract. It is esteemed by most families as a household necessity for boils, burns, sprains and sore throat; and as husbands, like everybody else, are usually puzzled about what to choose for a Christmas gift, it is well to feel that your choice will be appreciated in this instance.

INDIANA'S WEALTH.

The Condition of the People's Finance as Shown by the Records—The Agricultural Products.

L. D. KEIL.

The chief of the bureau of statistics of the state has made his annual report from which we cull the most important items.

The following estimate of the total gross value of the agricultural and manufactured products of the state for 1883 has been based upon the reports received by the bureau, and such other data as were available for this purpose, at current prices.

AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS.

Wheat..... $3,416,573
Corn..... 40,364,657
Oats..... 5,970,886

Barley..... 197,162
Rye..... 270,466

Flaxseed and flax straw..... 22,695,434
Timothy and clover hay and seed..... 2,623,580

Potatoes, Irish and sweet..... 2,623,580
Tobacco..... 1,770,811

Flax products..... 8,808,757
Cotton..... 9,480,000
Wool..... 992,416

Fatted hogs..... 21,491,426
Slaughered cattle..... 4,043,400
Oven products..... 227,730
Honey and maple sugar and molasses..... 1,222,194

Mineral products (coal mines and stone quarries)..... 3,888,418

Total agricultural products..... $16,062,322

Product of manufacturing industries..... 10,027,226

Grand total of productive industries..... $27,089,644

This exhibit is gratifying, indeed, but it is followed by an exhibit of state, county, township, city and personal indebtedness from mortgage records. While the latter lists are not at all complete, they give the following totals:

State debt..... $4,575,000
County, township and city debt..... 2,788,476

Mortgages to school fund..... 9,860,000

Mortgages to individuals on real estate..... 14,181,000

Chattel mortgages..... 9,000,000

Total..... $87,861,126

This makes an average indebtedness of a fraction over $33 for each man, woman and child in the state. This would look frightful if it were not that we have a dog for every poll tax payer in the state, or one dog for every three head of sheep, and if the tax can be collected on the dog it would take care of much of the interest account.

There are some curious comparisons to be found in this report. There are 75,686 males and 33,305 females employed in the factories, which produce $106,572,282 worth of manufactured goods, while it takes nearly 800,000 farmers to produce $156,562,338 worth of farm products. The average value of the production of each employee in factories has been $2,032 for the year, while the average value of the products of each farmer has been $2,020.

Between 1882 and 1883, 261 pianos passed out of the state, but their places were filled by 5,375 organs (for that was the gain), while the number of sewing machines had more than doubled.

In 1884 there is a gain of nine million bushels of wheat over 1883, while the corn crop has only held its own: Oats increased four million bushels. Rye and barley have held the same average, but there is a loss of nearly three million bushels of potatoes. The buckwheat crop is nearly doubled, but the maple sugar and molasses production has dropped off more than one-half; yet, as the sorghum crop has increased enormously, there may be ample compensations in this whole result.

The increase in hogs, horses, cattle and sheep has been about 1
